BUNNELL

Located in Flagler County, Florida, Bunnell serves as the county seat. The area now recognized as Flagler County was first populated around 1898 when Isaac Moody and Major J.F. Lambert arrived. Moody hailed from Georgia, while Lambert was originally from North Carolina. They found employment with George W. Deen, who operated a substantial turpentine business approximately twelve miles west of Bunnell. Moody was a “wood rider,” overseeing workers who chipped boxes and gathered resin from the pine forests. Meanwhile, Lambert managed the commissary, kept books, and oversaw the distillation process at the turpentine still. At that time, there was no established town. Alvah A. Bunnell had set up a cypress shingle mill close to the railroad. To mark the location for mail delivery and to drop off passengers, the area was referred to as the Bunnell stop, eventually leading to the adoption of the name Bunnell. According to the 2020 census, Bunnell has a population of 3,276 residents.

FLAGLER BEACH

Flagler Beach, located within Flagler County in Florida, has a rich history that predates European colonization. This area was inhabited by the Timucuan Indians for thousands of years, with estimates suggesting around 14,000 individuals resided there from approximately 10,000 B.C. until the mid-1500s. The first recorded Spanish explorers arrived in 1567. Among the early settlers was Josia Dupont, who received a land grant from the Spanish monarchy. Though he did not stay in Flagler Beach, his son, Abraham Depont, moved there with his family in 1825 and became one of the initial residents of the area. After the Civil War, the local economy experienced significant growth when the Mala Compra Plantation transitioned from sugar production to salt production via boiling seawater. Gradually, Flagler Beach started to draw individuals seeking recreational activities and leisure. In 1881, a canal was constructed to link the Matanzas and Halifax Rivers, creating an inland water route between Jacksonville and New Smyrna, which later evolved into the Intracoastal Waterway. The arrival of the railroad further propelled economic development in the region. In 1885, Henry Flagler acquired the narrow gauge railroad that served the area and upgraded it to standard gauge, facilitating increased transportation for local cattle, timber, potato, and citrus industries. Flagler's contributions to the region were so significant that when Flagler County was established in 1917, it was named in his honor. The county included several communities such as Bunnell, Espanola, St. Johns Park, Haw Creek, Dupont, Korona, and Ocean City, the latter of which is currently recognized as Flagler Beach. The city itself was officially incorporated in 1925, and according to the 2020 census, it had a population of 5,160.

Flagler County, situated in the northeastern part of Florida, has Bunnell as its county seat and Palm Coast as its largest city. Established in 1917, the county was formed from areas of adjacent Volusia and St. Johns counties and bears the name of the American industrialist Henry Flagler. Before the Spanish arrived in the 16th century, this region was home to various Native American tribes, including the Timucuan and Seminoles. By the early 1800s, the territory now recognized as Flagler County became increasingly populated with sizeable plantations dedicated to cash crops like sugar cane and corn. Flagler County was home to the largest sugar plantation along Florida's east coast, the remnants of which now reside in Florida's Bulow Plantation Ruins Historic State Park. During its early years, the county's prosperity was significantly bolstered by the cultivation of Irish potatoes, a fact reflected in its county seal that showcases a potato. In the early 1900s, Flagler County experienced the Florida land boom, leading to the growth of its tourism sector. The tourism surge facilitated Flagler Beach's incorporation in 1925 and the construction of the Flagler County Courthouse in downtown Bunnell in 1926. Additionally, the Marineland Dolphin Adventure, originally known as Marine Studios, opened its doors in 1938, becoming the first venue to showcase dolphins performing for audiences. According to the 2020 census, the population of Flagler County stood at 115,378.

PALM COAST

Located in Flagler County, Florida, Palm Coast is a city that emerged from a landscape primarily characterized by swamp and pine forests in the late 1950s, with only a handful of farms, beach houses, and a turpentine distillery present at the time. Today, it stands as the largest city in Flagler County, directly situated to the west of the Intra-coastal Waterway, with convenient access to Hammock Dunes via the Hammock Dunes Toll Bridge. Incorporated in 1999, Palm Coast is one of Florida's newest cities, boasting a picturesque setting along 70 miles of both saltwater and freshwater canals, as well as the Intracoastal Waterway, all just minutes away from the stunning shores of the Atlantic Ocean. According to the Census Bureau, it was recognized as the fastest-growing city in the nation based on percentage growth, with a population estimated at 98,411 in 2022.

BEVERLY BEACH

Flagler County, Florida, is home to the town of Beverly Beach. This community was established by a forward-thinking and well-known local lawyer and land developer, Claude Varn, who gained recognition across the state for his role in advancing the eastern region of Florida. Mr. Varn chose the name for the town because he found it appealing. In its early days, Beverly Beach was also referred to as Beverly Beach Shores, and a 1925 article in The Flagler Tribune labeled the region as the "American Riviera." On June 23, 1955, Beverly Beach achieved incorporation as an independent municipality. Mr. Varn held the position of Town Attorney, while Stanley L. Farnsworth became the first Mayor. According to the 2020 census, the town's population was 474.

Volusia County Florida

Situated in the east-central region of Florida, Volusia County lies between the Atlantic Ocean and the St. Johns River. The county gets its name from its largest community, Volusia, which was established on December 29, 1854, when Orange County was divided by the Florida Legislature. At that time, the population of Volusia County was approximately 600 individuals. The area that constitutes modern-day Volusia County was historically home to the indigenous Timucua and Mayaca tribes; however, neither of these groups remains today as separate ethnic entities due to the devastating impacts of diseases and conflicts following their encounters with European traders and settlers. During the period of British rule in Florida, Andrew Turnbull established a colony called New Smyrna in the southeastern part of Volusia County. This settlement was linked to St. Augustine, the capital city of East Florida, through the Kings Road. Following the colony's failure, many settlers, predominantly Menoricans and Greeks, made the 70-mile journey to St. Augustine. Founded from a portion of Orange County on December 29, 1854, Volusia County was named after the community of Volusia, situated in its northwestern area. Enterprise served as its initial county seat, but since 1887, DeLand has held that designation. According to the 2020 census, the population of the county was 553,543.

Daytona Beach

Daytona Beach, situated in Volusia County, is a resort city along the coast. Originally, this area was home to the Timucuan Indians, who lived in fortified villages. Their population suffered greatly due to European contact, leading to warfare, enslavement, and disease, ultimately resulting in their extinction as a distinct racial group by the 18th century through processes of assimilation and attrition. Before the Second Seminole War, the region was also frequented by the Seminole Indians, descendants of Creek tribes from Georgia and Alabama. During British rule in Florida from 1763 to 1783, the King's Road traversed what is now Daytona Beach, connecting Saint Augustine, the capital of East Florida, with Andrew Turnbull's experimental colony at New Smyrna. In 1804, Samuel Williams was granted 3,000 acres by the Spanish Crown, which had regained control of Florida after the American Revolutionary War. This area would later develop into Daytona Beach. He established a plantation relying on enslaved labor to cultivate cotton, rice, and sugar cane. However, during the Second Seminole War, his son Samuel Hill Williams abandoned the plantation after it was destroyed by the Seminoles. The Daytona Beach Historical District was previously the site of the Orange Grove Plantation, a citrus and sugar cane estate awarded to Samuel Williams in 1787. It was located on the western bank of the Halifax River's tidal channel, approximately 12 miles north of Mosquito Inlet. Originally a loyalist from North Carolina, Williams fled to the Bahamas with his family until Spanish Florida was open to non-Spanish settlers. Following his death in 1810, his family managed the plantation until it was set ablaze in 1835. In 1871, Mathias Day Jr. from Mansfield, Ohio, acquired the 3,200-acre property formerly known as the Orange Grove Plantation. He constructed a hotel, leading to the establishment of the town. However, by 1872, Day faced financial difficulties and lost ownership of the land. Despite this setback, residents chose to honor him by naming the city Daytona, and it was officially incorporated in 1876. The arrival of the St. Johns & Halifax River Railway in Daytona in 1886 marked a significant development. In 1889, Henry M. Flagler purchased the railway, integrating it into his Florida East Coast Railway network. In 1926, the towns of Daytona, Daytona Beach, Kingston, and Seabreeze were unified under the name "Daytona Beach," largely due to the efforts of civic leader J. B. Kahn and others. By the 1920s, Daytona Beach had earned the nickname, "The World's Most Famous Beach." Historically recognized for its coastline, Daytona Beach allows motorized vehicles on select stretches of hard-packed sand. The popularity of motorsports on these beaches led to the Daytona Beach and Road Course hosting races for more than half a century, until its replacement in 1959 by the Daytona International Speedway. This city serves as the headquarters for NASCAR. According to the 2020 census, the population of Daytona Beach stands at 72,647 inhabitants.

DeLand

DeLand is located in Volusia County, Florida, where it serves as the county seat. Previously, the city was referred to as "Persimmon Hollow," named for the wild persimmon trees that flourish near the natural springs. Access to the area was initially limited to travel via steamboat along the St. Johns River. Ruben Marsh is likely recognized as the first settler in this region. He arrived in Florida in 1841 during the Seminole Indian War as part of a scouting party that halted by a lake within what is now DeLand's boundaries. After the war concluded in 1846, Marsh married and relocated to DeLand, where he acquired a settler's claim. He constructed a cabin for his family and began farming livestock. In 1876, Henry Addison DeLand, a baking soda entrepreneur from Fairport, New York, visited the area and envisioned the establishment of a center for citrus cultivation, agriculture, and tourism. He sold his business in the North, recruited laborers to clear land, plan streets, build structures, and attract new settlers, mainly from upstate New York (though he never resided in DeLand year-round). On December 6, 1876, at 2:00 PM, the settlers opted to rename the community from "Persimmon Hollow" to "DeLand" to honor his contributions to its development. The area was officially incorporated as the "City of DeLand" in 1882 and became the county seat of Volusia County in 1887. Notably, it was Florida's first city to be electrified. Records indicate that during the inaugural City Commission meeting in 1882, city officials resolved to create a city seal featuring the symbols of "Faith, Hope, and Charity," represented by a cross, an anchor, and a heart. According to the 2020 U.S. census, DeLand had a population of 37,351.

Deltona

Originally, the area that is now Deltona and its neighboring communities was settled by the nomadic Timucuan, who found an abundance of fish and freshwater sources. Following Florida's admission as a state in 1845, steamboats commenced regular routes along the St. Johns River towards Lake Monroe. George Sauls, a former secret agent for the Confederacy during the American Civil War, along with his wife Adeline and their six children, became the first settlers in 1859. The land that currently comprises the city was developed as Deltona Lakes in 1962 by Robert, Elliott, and Frank Mackle, who purchased 17,203 acres to create a planned residential community. This development was opened to prospective buyers on November 18, 1962, featuring parcels designated for drainage retention, apartments, parks, churches, commercial hubs, an industrial sector, a community center, and a golf course. Residents of Deltona Lakes made attempts to gain city incorporation in 1987 and 1990, but succeeded only in 1995, when a city charter was established on September 9. A seven-member city commission was elected, and Deltona Lakes officially became a city on December 31, 1995, with its name abbreviated to Deltona. According to the most recent census, Deltona boasts a population of 93,692.

New Smyrna Beach

In 1768, the first European settlement was established in the area by Scottish physician Dr. Andrew Turnbull, who was a friend of James Grant, the governor of British East Florida. He founded the colony of New Smyrna after marrying Gracia Dura Bin (sometimes referred to as Maria Gracia Rubini), the daughter of a Greek merchant from Smyrna, a city in the Ottoman Empire (present-day Izmir, Turkey). The settlement was named to honor his wife's origins and the background of some of the laborers he recruited, who were from the Greek Mani Peninsula. Dr. Turnbull brought in approximately 1,300 settlers to cultivate crops like hemp, sugarcane, and indigo, and to craft rum at his plantation located on Florida's northeastern Atlantic coast. By the time New Smyrna was incorporated in 1887, it had a population of 150 residents. The town experienced significant growth in 1892 when Henry Flagler connected it to his Florida East Coast Railway, resulting in a surge in population. This expansion facilitated an economy that incorporated tourism alongside its existing citrus and commercial fishing industries. During the 1920s, in the Prohibition era, the city and its surrounding river islands became known for moonshine production and as refuges for rum runners who traveled from the Bahamas via Mosquito Inlet, now recognized as Ponce de León Inlet. In 1947, the city adopted the name "New Smyrna Beach" after the annexation of the oceanfront community of Coronado Beach. The most recent census recorded New Smyrna Beach's population at 32,655.

Ormond Beach

Ormond Beach, located in Volusia County, Florida, is often referred to as the birthplace of speed. This reputation stems from the fact that early motor vehicle enthusiasts gathered on its hard-packed shores for entertainment throughout the year, given that paved roads were still rare at the time. The city's name honors James Ormond I, a sea captain of Anglo-Irish-Scottish descent who was commissioned by King Ferdinand VII of Spain to transport Franciscan settlers to this region of Florida. Ormond had previously commanded ships for both Britain and Spain during the Napoleonic Wars, receiving accolades from King Ferdinand VII for his service. He later joined the Scottish Indian trade firm Panton, Leslie & Company, operating his armed brig called the "Somerset." Following the return of Florida to Spanish control, the U.S. acquired the territory in 1821, but the onset of the Second Seminole War postponed settlement until after 1842. The community was initially established in 1875 as New Britain by settlers from New Britain, Connecticut, but was officially incorporated as the Town of Ormond on April 22, 1880, named after its early plantation owner. In 1902, the first automobile races began on the compacted sands stretching from Ormond to Daytona Beach. Innovators in the automotive field, such as Ransom Olds with his Pirate Racer and Alexander Winton, showcased their vehicles. The American Automobile Association introduced timing equipment in 1903, contributing to the area's nickname as the "Birthplace of Speed." On April 25, 1950, a referendum led to the official renaming of the municipality to the City of Ormond Beach. According to the 2020 census, the population stood at 43,080.

Port Orange

Located in Volusia County, Florida, Port Orange serves as a major city within the Fun Coast region of the state. Following the U.S. Civil War, John Milton Hawks settled Port Orange, bringing freed African Americans to labor at his sawmill. In the region, Esther Hawks founded an integrated school. However, the colony faced challenges shortly after its establishment, leading many settlers to depart. The name Freemanville honors those who chose to remain in the community. According to the 2020 census, the population of Port Orange was recorded at 62,596.

GRAHAM SWAMP PRESERVE

East 5140 Colbert Ln. | Palm Coast

West 1125 Old Kings Rd. N | Palm Coast

This preserve is over 2,500 acres and is covered by a wetland hardwood swamp.

LONG CREEK NATURE PRESERVE

1050 Palm Harbour Pkwy. | Palm Coast | 386-986-2323

Spanning nine acres, Long Creek Nature Preserve is situated between two bodies of water: Long Creek and College Waterway. The preserve features fishing opportunities, non-motorized boating access, raised boardwalks, and hard-packed shell walking trails. This area is rich in archaeological significance, housing the Hernandez Landing Site that dates back to Florida's early 1800s Plantation Period. Long Creek itself is a distinct estuary system, often referred to as the ocean's nursery due to the rich marine life that thrives there. Visitors can expect to experience Florida's stunning natural landscapes, observing majestic bird species, oyster beds, and leaping mullet among other sights. The preserve connects to the expansive 225-acre Long Creek Basin and the saltwater canal system of Palm Coast. Its picturesque environment functions as a dynamic educational laboratory, hosting environmental education initiatives such as CHIRP (Children Helping in Resource Protection), a program offered by the City for the benefit of Flagler County schoolchildren. Ideal for kayaking, paddleboarding, and canoeing, Long Creek offers a winding path that navigates through the hammock and reaches a boardwalk with a boat launch for non-motorized vessels into Long Creek. At the opposite end of the park, a concrete slope provides access for non-motorized boats to College Waterway. Along Long Creek, paddling markers have been set up to aid paddlers in safely navigating the waterways. The route is marked by 15 signs directing adventurers from Long Creek Nature Preserve to the Intracoastal Waterway and further towards Bing's Landing. Each sign is numbered to facilitate location identification in case of emergencies.

PRINCESS PLACE PRESERVE

2500 Princess Place Rd. | Palm Coast | 386-313-4020

Nestled in the heart of Palm Coast, Florida, Princess Place Preserve offers a stunning blend of natural beauty and historical intrigue. Spanning over 1,500 acres, this protected area features an array of ecosystems, from serene coastal wetlands to lush pine forests, making it a haven for outdoor enthusiasts and nature lovers alike. The preserve is home to the iconic Princess Place, a historic homestead built in the late 1800s. Visitors can marvel at the architecture and learn about the area's rich history.

RIVER TO SEA PRESERVE

9805 N Oceanshore Blvd. | Marineland

This 90-acre preserve offers walking trails, nature vistas, and ecological education opportunities as well as public access to the beach. A canoe and kayak launch provides the Intracoastal Waterway and the Matanzas River access. Beaches, Bicycling, Birding, Camping - Group, Camping - Primitive, Canoe / Kayak Launch, Fishing, Hiking / Nature Trail, Pets, Picnic Pavilion, Picnicking, Restroom Facilities, Showers, Day Visitors, and Wildlife Viewing.

WASHINGTON OAKS GARDEN STATE PARK

6400 N Ocean Shore Blvd. | Palm Coast | 386-446-6750

Washington Oaks Garden State Park in Palm Coast, Florida, is a hidden gem that seamlessly combines the splendor of natural landscapes with exquisite manicured gardens, creating a delightful escape for nature lovers and history enthusiasts alike. Covering over 400 acres, the park features stunning formal gardens adorned with vibrant blooms, which beautifully contrast with the rugged coquina rock formations along the Atlantic coastline. Visitors can stroll along the picturesque paths lined with ancient live oaks draped in Spanish moss, creating a serene canopy that feels almost magical. The park also offers a glimpse into Florida's rich history; the historic home, known as the Washington Oaks Estate, provides a charming glimpse into the lives of the original owners and the development of the area.

Visionary Eyecare At Murabella was established in 2011, by Dr. Joanne Reed O.D. Her vision was to have a little family Optometrist office to serve the community of St. Johns County. She had a mission, and that mission was to focus on changing lives through Innovative Eye Care.

The mission of Visionary Eyecare is to provide the highest quality vision care in a comfortable, friendly, and professional environment. Our patients eye care needs are our highest priority. We aim to provide the resources for a lifetime of healthy eyes and excellent vision with compassion, courtesy, honesty, and respect.

Within 4 years, the practice needed another doctor to help with the care of the patient base she acquired. In 2015, she brought on Dr. Ashley Noegel O.D. to help her vision grow even more. There they both worked together to provide the highest quality in Routine Vision Care and Medical Eye Care. Their goal was to help the patient feel as comfortable and understanding of all their eyecare needs. With the growing community in St. Johns County Dr. Monica Vieth O.D. joined the practice in 2022. They continue to build lasting relationships with patients.

The growth of Visionary Eyecare At Murabella has Dr. Reed in amazement to where she says, "All I ever wanted was just a small Optometry office, I am so grateful for every patient we have the opportunity to help". She now can enjoy her family after so many years of the business in the making by trusting Dr. Ashley Noegel O.D. and Dr. Monica Vieth O.D. to keep caring about the vision of Visionary Eyecare At Murabella.

Health Benefits of the Outdoors

Spending time in nature offers numerous benefits for physical, mental, and emotional well-being.

Stress Reduction: Nature has a calming effect on the mind and body, helping to reduce stress levels. The peaceful surroundings, fresh air, and natural beauty can lower cortisol levels, decrease heart rate, and promote relaxation.

Improved Mental Health: Being in nature is associated with improved mood and mental health. Studies have shown that spending time outdoors can reduce symptoms of anxiety, depression, and other mental health disorders. Nature provides a sense of tranquility and perspective, which can help alleviate negative thoughts and emotions.

Increased Physical Activity: Nature encourages physical activity, whether it's hiking, biking, walking, or simply exploring outdoor spaces. Engaging in outdoor activities promotes exercise, which is essential for maintaining physical health and fitness. Additionally, being in nature often involves exposure to sunlight, which helps the body produce vitamin D and supports overall well-being.

Enhanced Creativity & Cognitive Function: Nature stimulates creativity and cognitive function. Research suggests that spending time in natural environments can improve problem-solving skills, boost creativity, and enhance concentration and focus. Nature provides a rich sensory experience that activates different parts of the brain, fostering cognitive development and innovation.

Connection with the Environment: Spending time in nature fosters a deeper connection with the environment and promotes environmental stewardship. When people experience the beauty and wonder of nature firsthand, they are more likely to develop a sense of appreciation and respect for the natural world. This connection can lead to greater awareness of environmental issues and a desire to protect and preserve natural habitats for future generations.

Overall, being in nature offers a multitude of benefits for both physical and mental well-being, making it essential for maintaining a healthy and balanced lifestyle.
